

High Risk Warning

TiB Sdn. Bhd. considers it a duty to warn users of the tibfund.io website (www.tibfund.io, <http://tibfund.io>) about the presence of high risks associated with direct or indirect activity with cryptocurrency, tokenised assets, derivatives.

Investment risks:

The digital asset market, due to high volatility, is capable of significant changes in rates, which can bring high profits to investors and traders. The downside of it is a high risk of loss. In the case of the cryptocurrency market, derivatives for cryptocurrency instruments, as well as tokenised assets, such risks can lead to the complete loss of funds of the investor or trader. In the light of this information, the user must himself determine the degree of acceptability of such risks for him and his activities. It is necessary to accept the fact that profitability is not guaranteed, and the activity is highly risky.

Technical risks:

The project activity is dependent on the work of cryptocurrency exchanges, companies conducting ICO, reliability of exchange services and services provided by the storage services of cryptoactive assets, as well as technical failures in the work of providers, hosts, registrants. In this case, it is necessary to accept the fact that technical failures in the operation of these services can interfere with the stability of the project or temporarily suspend it, until the technical limitations on external services are eliminated. The User understands and accepts technical risks, and the Company is not responsible for failures that occurred through no fault of the Company.

Institutional risks:

Legislation to regulate the market for cryptocurrency, derivatives and tokenized assets in many countries is imperfect or does not exist de facto and de jure. The user accepts and understands the fact that under certain conditions circumstances may arise that will not allow the Company to provide services in this jurisdiction. Also the user must make sure that he, as a resident of his country, is not prohibited from such activity or that this activity is not subject to restrictions that may lead to the impossibility of using the Company's service.

Man-made risks, force majeure:

The user understands and accepts the fact that in some cases, the Company may not have technical or other possibility of providing the service. These cases include risks associated with natural or man-made disasters, force majeure circumstances such as wars, military conflicts, terrorist acts and other situations that directly or indirectly restrict the Company in providing services.
